Rules for the game of criterial poker

1. The game takes place in five-person teams.
2. Each team receives a game board and a set of 15 cards.
3. The game consists in placing the cards on the board so that the card layout reflects the team's views on the principles of healthy eating (ie in the field marked with the number "I" should be cards with the most important rules according to students, and in the fields marked with the numbers "II" and "III" - cards with rules less relevant).
4. The person assigned by the teacher shuffles the cards and distributes them to colleagues.
5. The student starting the game places one of his cards on the board in the field marked with the number "I", "II" or "III" and justifies his decision. Successive students do the same.
6. If any student decides that his card should be in a field that is already occupied, he can negotiate the card with the other team members. If the team approves the student's arguments, he may place the card on the board and the rejected card returns to the person who previously placed it.
7. The game ends when all the cards are on the board in a layout that matches all team members.
8. After the end of the game, each team presents the most important principles for healthy eating.
